In the rye catcher, Holden Caulfield is consistently connected with his red hat that says it is the people of him killing the hat. Cool to see the writers of this show incorporate classical literature that shows the madness of people. I put this hat I bought in New York that morning. It was this red hat, with one of those very long peaks. I saw it in the window of this sports shop when we left the subway, immediately after noticing that I lost all the leaves of Goddam. He cost me only a dollar. The way I wore it, I swung the old peak around towards the back "very cully, I admit I admit, but I liked it so. Holden describes first by putting his red hat as he returns At his dorm room after visiting Mr. Spencer. Explain that he bought the hat in New York City, immediately after understanding that he lost his team fencing equipment. Here, the red hat is symbolized. Holden's alienation from society and its intentional isolation by people. Furthermore, the purchase of the hat is the way to try to protect themselves from the consequences of society, such as the ridiculous that he probably received after losing his team's equipment. Holden describes that he wore the peak of the hat around his back and A ĉ â,- "he did that way, A ĉ â,- seeming to get comfort from the sense of individuality that the hat led him. A ĉ â "Sensendo at home we wear a hat like shooting, in, for Chrissake, A ĉ â ĉ â" He said. A ĉ â,- "is a deer shooting hat.â ĉ.... Taking aim. A ĉ â,- "This is a popular shooting hat, A ĉ â,-" I said. A ĉ â,- "Shoot people in this hat. In this dialogue between Holden and Ackley, Ackley Scoffs of the Holden hat, saying that the hat looks like "deer shooting hat." HoldenA ĉ â,- ĉ "e The defensive response reveals that he sees the hat as a symbol of individualism and not It wants to be considered something that expected as a common deer hat. Furthermore, the comment of Holden declares that it was "people who shoot hat reveal feelings of hostility towards a company that, in his eyes, remembers it continually reminds He didn't fit. While the trend of Holden to carry out such observations out in color reveals his desire on-going to stand out as an individual, these comments could also serve a second purpose: they allow Holden to isolate themselves from others, which provides protection from the uncomfortable feeling of always feeling like A stranger. I couldn't find my goddam hat anywhere. In the end I found it. He was under the bed. I put it forward and turned the old peak around his back, the way I liked it, and then I went ahead and took a look at my stupid face in the mirror. You've never seen Gore in your life. First before this scene. Holden chose a stradter struggle, who left Holden on the floor, bleeding and upset. After the fight, Holden immediately looks for his From red hunting, demonstrating how the hat makes him feel protected and isolated from the pain and pain of the world around him. The red color also leads the meaning to this scene, since the red hat on the head of Holden corresponds to the red blood all the face of him, and both point to the intense emotions of the scene. The anger and desperation of Holden together with the Stradlater frustration all connect with the red color of the Holden hat. We arrived â ĉ
