Brenderup horse trailer owners manual

Even the coupler you choose will figure into the load capacity. While selecting an equipment trailer or box trailer may seem like a straightforward process, you need to carefully factor in a trailer's features before you purchase it. Also, place an emphasis on spring-assisted lifts on ramps to make hauling a breeze. The width between the fenders should also be checked to permit various kinds of equipment to be hauled. Choose a design that allows movement of rear load ramps to support various wheel treads as well. We reserve the right to correct any errors on this website. Tandem trailer axles are better if you want to carry heavy loads. When you carefully calculate your needs in terms of trailer details, load capacity, and a trailer's quality, you will find a trailer that will fit all your needs. When selecting a trailer for hauling equipment or debris, you need to consider the following criteria before making a choice. Check Out the Details When selecting a trailer that supports your needs for hauling, you need to review the size of the trailer as well as the type of weight you plan to haul. The product range may vary according to the individual dealer. Brenderup and other product and feature marks are trademarks of the Brenderup Group. The placement of the axle is critical to ensure extra safe towing as well. Never underestimate the total weight of what you plan to haul. Weight distribution can vary, depending on what you add in attachments. Factors that go into this decision include the type of ramp and flooring, and other related features, such as the type of tongue jack, tailgates, side rails, winches, and even spare tires. Everything which you can expect from a Brenderup trailer. Look for a trailer that features a one-piece frame so the number of joint or butt welds is limited. Make sure the trailer provides enough room so the equipment can provide the correct tongue loads. 8. LED lights - did you ever install LED lights like you said you might? If so, did you make a video of those steps, or have suggestions? Here's a youtube video I came across published 4/11/2014, they say they will follow-up with detailed steps. For instance, if you are a contractor who drives a one-ton pickup, who wishes to haul a mini excavator, you should carefully review tilt-bed trailers that have stationary decks. This type of trailer has a gross vehicle rating or GVWR of about 16,000 pounds. Prices shown are recommended retail prices. With the trailer as a starting point, we at Brenderup want to solve all sorts of transportation tasks. - Judy B. (note from Jeff: The documents are stored in Dropbox Folder at THIS LINK
