Universal/Kobal/Shutterstock If writers write what they know, then everyone should have the luxury of time to eat a full buffet breakfast every morning. The characters in the movie have no problem sitting at a table of eggs, toast, pancakes and orange juice on a regular Tuesday morning, while the real-life filmmakers sit down for a granola bar to go. But don't expect it to eat up the whole deluge. It doesn't matter if they eat at home or at a restaurant; nobody finishes a whole meal in the movies. At best, they get a few bites before being called to an emergency. Perhaps industry executives think that the public would be bored watching the characters eat a full meal like normal people. But I want to see Ryan Reynolds finish a plate of spaghetti, please! Do you like to laugh at the film conventions? Check out these funny job titles used for famous tricks. Warner Bros TV/Bright/Kaufman/Crane Pro/Kobal/Shutterstock If a scene takes place in someone's office, the work is rarely done. Characters are planning jokes, planning to quit, planning to take over the company, planning how to do their job, but they're never doing their job. And this trait is not found in the movies. How Ross, Rachel and the company could spend so much time in Central Perk without getting fired, I'll never know. Clubhouse Pictures/Kobal/Shutterstock How often do you say someone's name during a conversation? Possibly once at the beginning when they say hello and maybe once at the end, right? You can just make eye contact, start talking, and then say, "All right, see you." But if you're talking to Ashley in a movie, you have to let Ashley know that you're here for her if she ever needs anything, Ashley, and that she's gonna survive this breakup because you know Ashley? She's a tough cookie, Ashley is, and her friends love her, Ashley. All right? Okay. Bye, Ashley. Speaking of movie dialogue, do you know how to properly recite these famous movie quotes? Are you wrong? 20th Century Fox / Kobal / Shutterstockah Yes, the central film element of each box office block full of action that is stolen by every wannabe full of action. The stars of the film are moving away dramatically when an explosion spreads behind them, and they continue without so many movements to see what damage has been done. They don't care if they're about to be hit by flying debris. They don't fall off the shock waves. That's not how a normal person would react. But Dang, does it look great? Take a look at this list of the most famous film quotes of all time. Jay Secunds / Marvel / Walt Disney / Kobal / Shutterstockokvery Woman shares the common struggle to try to keep her hair in place. We use hair pins, hair clips and hair lacquer, but even then, there is always a single strand that appears again. And that's all before we leave the house. However, when Scarlett Johansson or any other feminine action hero is caught up in intense combat with the bad, he moves away without just a victory, but his perfect hair, in the place. It's just not fair. Joyce Rudolph / MGM / KOBAL / SHUTTERSTOCKWOMEN Running in Heelsthe The same strong feminine leaders can, and do, perform all their heroic tricks on the heels because, well, I'm not really sure. Even in scenes where the hordes of people are fleeing from a disaster, the odds are women in heels because women use them exclusively. Of course, the blow of spectacles for female spectators is observing a woman with a stone face, escaped from an explosion in the heels without looking back at her while her perfect hair blows in the wind. How many of these classic films are found to people about seeing you've actually seen? Moviestore - Shutterstockback In the day, a screenwriter decided that necessary to make a getaway. Windows Weren't doors and options, so the only available output was an air vent. And so began the trend of making the characters move through air vents as an alternative means of moving between locations, although real real air ventsAbout the size of a small child. And definitely collapse under the weight of an adult person. You would want to check these films that have hilarious titles in other countries. Francois Duhamel / Paramount / Kobal / Shutterstockchoes of movies watch television, they are almost always seeing the news, because the news anchor is making some revelation on the zombie apocalypse or a loose cataster killer or in any catalog Strophe Why can not you turn on the spongebob Squarepants and rest for a change? HOUSE OF TOMOL / AVERSANO / WHICH WAY SI MARK / KOBAL / SHUTTERSTOCKMANY, including the majority of all the ROM commas ever, are established in the Great Apple, but not the real one. New York's real apartments are approximately half of the sizes you see on the screen. Green scaffolds cover most of the buildings, while the alternative NYC of the film industry has conveniently undone this person. And the real New Yorkers rarely speak or interact with their neighbors, much less resort to them for Salvia Tips or an intelligently written Punchline. Here are 16 more of the most historically inaccurate movies. Dale Robinette / Black Label Media / Kobal / Shutterstockif Aliens went to condemna our modern movies and confuse them for documentaries, assumed that the only two cities in the United States were the city of New York and the Angels. What conventional movies take place in Charlotte or Milwaukee or Salt Lake City? None, but interesting things happen in those cities, à € ™. And many other past cities of the country! But hey, at least there are many sets of real life movies that you can visit. Fox Fox Fox / Kobal / Shutterstockif Entrance in a bar and I said: "I'll have a beer," the waiter leaned a little forward, raising his eyebrow and I hoped that he specifies what about the many in the touch I want. In the movies, you can order "a beer" and the bartender will give you his preparation of choice without asking any follow-up questions, even if We never met. Of course, if the characters in the movie were to use real beer brands, the studio could be sued for defamation, HuffPost explains, but the least the characters could do is order a beer or IPA instead of "a beer".The movies are guilty of doing things wrong. Sure, but so are the spectators, like this pop culture, the majority of people Mix. Universal/Kobal/ShutterstockTeachers have an excellent perception of time. They meticulously plan how much material can fit in a class period and adjust those estimates as needed. In fact, that's your job. So it's not clear why the film industry gets the impression that teachers are always interrupted by the bell right in the middle of their lectures. Then, to make things even more confusing, the teachers shout at their students the assignments of that day, which they are obviously not paying attention and most likely have already walked out the door. If school were like this in real life, graduation rates would decrease considerably. Next, don't miss these trivial facts from the movie that you won't believe to be true.
