10 SUPER Fat Burning Foods

SALMON

Is one of the best meats for you overall and it tastes awesome too. Salmon is loaded with protein and Omega-3 fatty acids. Both boosting your metabolism and burning more fat. These fatty acids also have a very positive effect on your cardiovascular health, protecting you against heart disease.

TURKEY

Is another great meat for burning fat. Turkey is packed with protein for higher calorie burn and is also naturally lower in fat compared to chicken. Just make sure you buy turkey in its most natural form (only natural flavorings) and not injected with butter or other fatty substances.

LEAN BEEF

Is a very popular meat around the world due to its flavorful taste and wide availability. Lean beef especially is a great fat burning food as it has a reduced amount of saturated fat compared to other beef yet is still loaded with protein. It also contains iron which is vital for the creation of hemoglobin in your red blood cells.

CHILI PEPPERS

Are not only great for spicing up your meals, but they are in themselves a fat burning food. Red ones are the best in relation to fat but Chili peppers contain an element called capsaicin which has a thermic effect on your body and ramps up your metabolism. They are a natural anti-inflammatory and are also a great source of Vitamin C, B6, K, Potassium and especially Vitamin A accounting for over 100% of your required daily value per serving.

SKIM MILK

Contains large amounts of calcium, helping to increase your metabolism and burn calories. There's some buzz about vitamins which state that those who drink moderate amounts of milk or have the dairy products daily have less body fat than those who don't. Skim milk is best but if you find it too watery, 1% milk is a good alternative.

GREEN TEA

Has been enjoyed by the Japanese for centuries and has been spreading in popularity the past several years. Green tea is a great fat burning beverage due mostly to the EGCG compound which it contains stimulating your brain and nervous system resulting in higher calorie burn. Green tea also has powerful antioxidants and studies have shown it to even reduce the risk of some cancers.

SPINACH

This isn't just for Popeye though he did have the right idea about the veggie. Spinach is loaded with vitamins and nutrients yet is a mere 9 calories per serving. A single serving of spinach contains over 80% of your daily value (DV) requirement for vitamins A and a whopping 50% of required Vitamin K. Spinach is also full of antioxidants that reduce the risk of heart disease, stroke and a number of cancers.

EDAMAME

These are one of our all time favorite fat burning snack foods. They are essentially soy beans which have been lightly boiled and eaten of course the best is probably soybean. Originally from Japan, edamame are an excellent source of protein, Vitamin C, iron, and calcium! They also contain top of antioxidant soy isoflavones and are low on the glycemic index.

BROCCOLI

Is one of those super foods that you can never really get enough of. It is densely packed with nutrients including calcium, vitamins A, vitamin C, fiber, water, and zinc. The calcium, vitamin C and fiber all contribute to burning fat and increasing your metabolism. On top of that, broccoli is full of antioxidants that provide a multitude of health benefits including decreasing the risk of heart disease and certain cancers.

OATS

A great way to fill you up on they're loaded with soluble fiber, which helps reduce cholesterol and lowers the risk of heart disease. They're also a very good source of niacin which boosts your energy and immune system by producing antibodies. One of my favorite cereals is in a nice big bowl of oatmeal in the morning with some blueberries on top.
