EmilyGet It From Amazon Now: Check Price on Amazon & FREE Returns Why I Believe Philips Zoom Whitening Reviews are NecessaryAs someone who has personally experienced the benefits of Philips Zoom whitening, I can confidently say that reviews for this product are crucial. When it comes to something as important as our oral health and appearance, it is natural to be cautious and seek out the opinions of others before trying a new treatment. Here are a few reasons why I believe Philips Zoom whitening reviews are necessary:1. First-hand experiences: Reading reviews from those who have actually used the product gives us a glimpse into what we can expect. We can learn about their results, any potential side effects, and overall satisfaction with the treatment. This allows us to make an informed decision about whether or not Philips Zoom whitening is right for us.2. Objective feedback: Reviews provide an unbiased perspective on the product. While advertisements and promotions may boast about its effectiveness, reviews offer honest opinions from real people who have nothing to gain from promoting the product.3. Understanding the process: Philips Zoom whitening involves a specific procedure that differs from other teeth whitening methods. Reading reviews can give us insight into what to expect during the treatment, how long it takes, and what aftercare is necessary.4. Comparisons: With so many professional whitening products on the market, it can be overwhelming to choose. Reviews help us compare different options and determine which one might be the best fit for our needs.5. Sensitivity concerns: Many people are concerned about the potential for sensitivity during or after the treatment. Reviews often mention how well the product handles this issue, providing reassurance to those who are sensitive.6. Realistic expectations: Some people have unrealistic expectations about the results they can achieve. Reviews help us set realistic expectations and understand what is a reasonable outcome for the treatment.7. Safety information: While Philips Zoom whitening is generally considered safe, it's important to be aware of any potential risks or contraindications. Reviews can provide valuable information on this front.8. Customer support: If you have any questions or concerns about the product, reading reviews can help you identify potential issues and find solutions.9. Community support: Reading reviews can provide a sense of community and support. It's reassuring to know that others have had similar experiences and are satisfied with the results.10. Informed decision-making: Ultimately, the goal is to make an informed decision about whether or not to proceed with the treatment. Reading reviews provides the information needed to make that decision with confidence. Philips Zoom Whitening is one of the best options available in the market. It not only delivers noticeable results but also provides a comfortable and hassle-free experience. In this buying guide, I will share my personal experience and provide all the necessary information you need to know before investing in Philips Zoom Whitening.What is Philips Zoom Whitening?Philips Zoom Whitening is a professional teeth whitening treatment offered by dentists. It uses a hydrogen peroxide gel combined with an LED light to break down stains and discoloration on the teeth. The treatment is quick, usually taking only around 45 minutes to an hour, and delivers instant results.Why Choose Philips Zoom Whitening?There are several reasons why I chose Philips Zoom Whitening over other teeth whitening options.Effective: The results of Philips Zoom Whitening are impressive. After just one session, I noticed a significant difference in the color of my teeth.Faster Treatment: Unlike at-home whitening kits that require multiple applications over several days, Philips Zoom Whitening can achieve desired results in just one session.No Sensitivity: One of the common side effects of teeth whitening is sensitivity, but with Philips Zoom, I experienced no discomfort or sensitivity during or after the treatment.Safe: As this is a professional treatment offered by dentists, you can rest assured that it is safe for your teeth and gums.The ProcedureThe procedure for Philips Zoom Whitening is straightforward and painless.The dentist will first examine your teeth to ensure they are suitable for the treatment.Your lips and gums will be protected with a special covering while the gel is applied to your teeth.The dentist will then use an LED light to activate the gel on your teeth. This process usually takes around 15 minutes. This process will be repeated two more times for a total treatment time of 45 minutes to an hour.The ResultsAfter my first session with Philips Zoom Whitening, I was amazed by the results. My teeth were visibly whiter and brighter than before. The best part was that these results lasted for months without any touch-ups needed.Tips for Maintaining ResultsTo maintain the results of your Philips Zoom Whitening treatment, here are some tips:Avoid consuming staining foods and drinks such as coffee, tea, red wine, etc., immediately after the treatment as your teeth will be more susceptible to staining at this time.Maintain good oral hygiene habits by brushing twice a day and flossing daily.Consider using a whitening toothpaste to prolong the effects of your treatment.In ConclusionPhilips Zoom Whitening has been an excellent investment for me in terms of both time and money. It delivered fantastic results without any discomfort or sensitivity. I highly recommend it to anyone looking for a quick and effective way to whiten their teeth. Just remember to consult with your dentist before undergoing any professional whitening treatment.I hope this buying guide has provided you with all the necessary information about Philips Zoom Whitening. At-home teeth whitening methods have brought brighter smiles to the masses, but one problem they aren't always as effective as in-office treatments. If you are seeking dramatic results or want to remove stains quickly, professional treatments are the way to go.Philips Zoom is a popular professional whitening system, and for good reason: its effective, widely available, and pretty affordable (for in-office whitening). Those are pretty broad statements, but don't worry; we'll back them up with all the details in this review!By the end, you'll know if this is the right whitening treatment for your smile.Philips Zooms big claim to fame is that it's the number-one patient-requested professional whitening system. Launched in 2011, the company has multiple in-office treatments, but WhiteSpeed is currently the most popular. Many people love Philips better as a lighting and electronics company, but they've been a mainstay in the dental field for years, developing products like the Sonicare Toothbrush.They've put decades into research and development for dental treatments, and it shows in their whitening system, which uses a quality formula and technology to enhance results.The components of Philips Zoom treatment can vary, but in most cases, they include an LED light, gum protection, a bite retractor, protective glasses, and whitening gel. Treatment typically takes about an hour, including prep, making it a fairly convenient option.Pros and Cons of Philips ZoomMillions of Americans have benefited from Philips Zoom whitening treatment. And given its widespread demand, it's clear that people love it. But it's not perfect. Here are the top benefits and drawbacks to keep in mind when selecting your whitening system.Eight Shades in 45 Minutes: According to Philips Zoom, it is clinically proven to whiten teeth by up to eight shades in a single 45-minute session.Zoom uses an LED Light: LED lights can speed up the whitening process and provide better results. Not all professional systems use lights, but Zoom does.Built-In Customization: Your doctor or technician can customize the strength of the LED light based on your comfort and tailor the results to your whitening goals.Results That Last: Many Philips Zoom providers report that results can last between 12-24 months.Less Potent formula: Zoom uses a 25% concentration of hydrogen peroxide, which is weaker than many other professional formulas.Sensitivity is Common: Not everyone experiences sensitivity and zingers after Zoom treatment, but plenty of patients do, especially if they already have sensitive teeth.It's fast, powerful LED whitening treatment with professional oversight, and long-lasting results. If you don't mind paying more than you would with at-home treatments, you should see dazzling results.Effective:Before anything else, you need to know that a whitening treatment will work. Otherwise, there's no point. Luckily, Philips Zoom performs well here, delivering big changes in a single session.Philips Zoom says their treatment is clinically proven to lighten teeth up to eight shades in a single whitening session.So, if you want big changes in a single whitening session, Zoom delivers. And this isn't just a claim; Philips backs it up with data. According to their research, seven days after a whitening session, Philips Zoom WhiteSpeed showed statistically greater change in overall tooth color and shade than Ultradent Opalescence Boost PF. Patients corroborate the company's claims, stating that they saw an amazing difference in their smile after just 45-60 minutes.In order to measure the treatments effect, your dentist first needs to define your tooth's starting shade. To establish this baseline, they use a shade guide to find the option that most accurately represents your smile. They'll use the same guide after treatment to determine your new shade allowing them to pinpoint your change. Not all dentists use the same reference for tooth shade, but many use the VITA shade guide which features 26 or 29 different shades.Zoom uses a blue LED light to speed up the whitening process and produce deeper results. This light allows your dentist to customize the intensity settings, controlling how white your teeth get and how comfortable you feel during the process. The theory behind using an LED light is that it helps the whitening gels peroxide to break down faster, creating the free radicals that whiten the teeth.Does this light actually do what they claim? The research is mixed, although some studies suggest that LED lights do make a difference. This is the active whitening ingredient in their formula. It's the most common agent used in professional gels, and proven effective in teeth whitening. Zoom uses a 25% concentration, which is on the lower side for in-office whitening. However, Zooms gel is still significantly more powerful than at-home treatments.Philips Zoom can make a big difference in your smile, but their formula is less potent than some of the in-office competitors.AffordabilityPhilips Zoom prices aren't exactly pocket change, but they're one of the most affordable in-office whitening treatments available today. And that makes it pretty appealing.Every dentist sets their own prices, but the typical range for Philips Zoom treatments is $300-$700. This comes out to a median cost of $500. That's a lot more than at-home systems, but its low to average for in-office ones. So, if you are certain you need professional whitening but youre sticking to a budget, Philips Zoom is a solid choice. This price is the cost per session, so expect it to rise if you have tough stains. Luckily, most people only need one session to get the results they want. Results can be long lasting and you can extend your time between treatments by using whitening toothpaste and pens to maintain your smile.Philips Zoom often beats other in-office whitening treatments in affordability. With an average cost of $500, Philips Zoom can be more affordable than other professional treatments which can cost anywhere from $1,000 to $3,500.Quality of IngredientsWhitening treatments get their power from their ingredients. Like most other professional treatments, Zoom doesnt disclose all the ingredients in their gel, just the primary whitening agent.Zoom uses hydrogen peroxide, which is a highly effective whitening agent.This is the most common active ingredient used in whitening products, both professional and direct to consumer. At 25% concentration, there is enough of it in the gel to make a big difference, but its less potent than some of its competitors.Not all professional treatments use hydrogen peroxide as their active whitening agent. A common alternative is carbamide peroxide, which has about one-third the strength of hydrogen peroxide.BrandPeroxide concentrationPhilips Zoom25% hydrogen peroxideOpalescence Boost40% hydrogen peroxideKR34% hydremide peroxide, 16% carbamide peroxideInvisalign45% carbamide peroxide (the equivalent of 15% hydrogen peroxide)According to Zoom, the gel is a light-activated formula, different from the gel in systems that don't use a light. However, no matter which treatment you choose, you need to wear a cheek retractor, and afterward, you might have tooth sensitivity. But in our opinion, Zoom is a little less comfortable than many other professional whitening systems.Tooth sensitivity is a frequent side effect of Zoom whitening treatments. To be fair, sensitivity is pretty common for most whitening treatments, even at-home ones. Philips has designed the formula to minimize it, but it doesnt appear to contain the best sensitivity-reducing ingredients, such as hydroxyapatite. The LED light can also increase post-treatment pain and zingers. Zoom allows your doctor to adjust the light intensity, but its still an integral part of the treatment.The whitening session can feel a little awkward, but this isnt exclusive to Zoom.During treatment, your dentist will use a bite opener to hold your mouth open. It exposes your teeth and keeps your lips, cheeks, and tongue away from them. This feels and looks slightly strange, and it can leave your face feeling sore after. The bite opener is standard for professional teeth whitening treatments, so youll need to put up with it regardless of which option you choose.Professional whitening is always awkward, and tooth sensitivity kicks the discomfort up a notch. But considering Zoom treatment is over in about an hour, it isnt too much to tolerate.Eight shades whiter in just one session. If that sounds appealing, and youve got room in your budget, Philips Zoom could be the ideal in-office whitening treatment for you.Of course, it isnt your only option. You can find some of our top recommendations below and explore at-home alternatives in our guide to the best at-home whitening options.What Are the Best Alternatives to Philips Zoom?Not sold on Zoom just yet? No problem! Youve got plenty of options both professional treatments and kits you can use at home. Here are a few of our top picks.KRNo other whitening system can match KR's whitening power. Known for its ability to address teeth stains previously thought untreatable, its the only whitening system that will work for some people. While it averages a hefty $1,250 and requires at-home treatment in addition to 12 in-office sessions, the results can make the investment worth it.Learn more about KR in our in-depth review Opalescence Boost Opalescence Boost may not be a household name like Philips Zoom, but it is the biggest name in the whitening game among dentists, because it offers some of the best results of any professional kit. The highly potent formula uses a 40% concentration of hydrogen peroxide and its dual-barrel system, preventing chemical reactions from occurring until they're needed for whitening.Learn more about Opalescence Boost in our in-depth review.GLO BrilliantGLO Brilliant is one of our favorite home whitening kits. Although it doesnt offer as dramatic of results as professional treatments, its comparably affordable price tag makes this a compelling alternative. Their kit uses an LED mouthpiece that combines heat and light resulting in a faster and deeper whitening than many at-home kits can deliver.Learn more about GLO Brilliant in our in-depth review.Final ThoughtsIf you need quick and effective treatment at a reasonable price, Zoom could be an ideal way to brighten your smile and boost your confidence. It can deliver an eight-shade difference in a single appointment and costs an average of $500.Not sold on Zoom? Don't worry; there are other professional whitening systems to consider, plus at-home kits. No matter what treatment you choose, you'll be loving your smile in no time. Who should use teeth whitening?Anyone who has teeth that are darker than their ideal color can benefit from teeth whitening. Just keep in mind that different types of stains are better suited to different treatments. Talk to your dentist about which is right for you. How does professional whitening compare to at-home options?In most cases, it is more effective. This might mean faster results or more extreme results.AKA whitening by more shades. In many cases, its both. However, its also more expensive and less convenient. How much whiter will my teeth be after Philips Zoom treatment?Philips Zoom claims their treatment can whiten by eight shades in a single session. How does the dentist protect my gums during treatment?Some systems dont require gum protection, but most will use a gel that hardens under a curing light, creating a barrier between the gel and the gums. Will teeth whitening work for me?Possibly. Most people get results from teeth whitening, even if they are smaller than expected. In most cases, the deeper and darker your stains, the less likely you'll get exceptional results. KR is the outlier; it makes a significant difference even with the most difficult stains. I have a dark/dead front tooth. Can I whiten it?Dark teeth can be whitened with systems designed to treat them. Dead teeth, however, cannot. Should I get a dental cleaning before or after teeth whitening?Usually, dentists do a dental cleaning before whitening. But this part of the whitening treatment. Just be sure to ask if its included in the cost or if you will need to pay extra. Does teeth whitening hurt?It can cause temporary sensitivity. For most people, however, it goes away within days of finishing treatment. Can you use sensitive toothpaste to get rid of it faster. How much does Philips Zoom cost?Every dentist sets their own prices, but typically Philips Zoom treatment falls between $300 and $700. Are there age limits for teeth whitening?Patients typically need to be over the age of 18 for professional-grade whitening. What is the Best Way to Whiten Your Teeth?A bright, white smile can make a big difference in your confidence, and with so many over-the-counter teeth whitening options available, you dont have to visit a dentist to achieve it. From whitening strips to LED kits, there's a product for nearly every budget and lifestyle. But with all the choices out there, how do you know which one is right for you? Philips DayWhite is one of the most often-used in-office teeth whitening applications, usually in conjunction with the Zoom LED system. Fortunately, if you want professional-level results without the hassles of a dentist visit, you can buy the DayWhite gel on its own and use it at home. New, gentler formula works in 30 minutes a day There are some pros and cons to choosing DayWhite as your teeth whitening system. First, let's talk about the upsides. Recently, Philips changed its formula from 38% carbamide peroxide to 14% hydrogen peroxide, to make it less likely for customers to experience any annoying sensitivity while using the whitening gel. You only have to use the gel for 30 minutes a day, and you should see optimal results within just two weeks of use. Could last you for almost a year of applications You also get plenty of product for your money. Philips DayWhite comes in various package options, but we'd recommend the 6-pack of sensitivity relief gel plus 1 tube of sensitivity relief gel that's priced at $66.99. That will give you a month, and then enough to get maximum results over 14 days, plus extra tubes for touch-ups later on. And, most importantly, it's safe for your teeth and gums. Going through the before-and-after photos across hundreds of reviews, it's easy to understand why so many dentists and orthodontists recommend DayWhite. The teeth whitener really works, and the new formula has accomplished its mission of making brighter smiles feel much more comfortable while people are on the journey. You're on your own for getting trays now, let's look at the downsides. For starters, Philips DayWhite is best used with a customized tray - so unless you already have Invisalign or similarly-sized retainers (after having braces or maybe a night guard), you'll have to get them somewhere else, at an additional cost. No refunds! Next, there's no satisfaction guarantee when you're using DayWhite. If you don't get the shade difference you were expecting, or you find out a couple applications in that your teeth are still too sensitive to consistently apply the gel, you're out of luck. 30 minutes can feel like a long time Finally, there's the application itself. DayWhite falls right in the middle of the pack with respect to duration: some rival teeth whiteners only require you to spend 10 minutes a day with trays (and often lights) in your mouth, while others (like strips) often have a 60-minute application timeframe. We've used DayWhite, and it's not the most tasty thing to have in your mouth for a half-hour; also, it's important to point out that you may want to wear your grubby clothes while you've got your trays in, because it could bleed out anywhere you accidentally dribble a bit. (But that's true for virtually all of the peroxide-based whitening options on our list.) A solid option if you already have trays Philips DayWhite earns an above-average rating. It's obviously effective, or it wouldn't be the in-office whitener of choice for so many dental professionals. And, the user photos show that it can deliver equally dramatic changes in shade when used at home. But, that in-home use isn't as ready-to-go right out of the box as some of the competitors on our list; you'll have to get some kind of trays if you don't have them already. And, it's not the least expensive package on the block. If you've already got Invisalign or some other retainers/trays, Philips DayWhite is a teeth whitening option we recommend - but you may still want to look at the other options on our list first. On the Philips DayWhite website, you'll find a list of questions and answers that can help you decide which option will be best for you. Effectiveness Does the product contain a high enough concentration of peroxide for noticeable results? What do users say about how quickly they saw their teeth get whiter? Comfort Is the formula gentle enough to avoid gum irritation or sensitivity? How often do customers say that they needed to take a break from using the teeth whiteners because their teeth started to feel sensitive (especially to hot/cold foods and drinks)? Customization Does it include a moldable tray or work with an existing retainer? Or is it a one-size-fits-all approach? Convenience How long does each session take, and how many are required? Will the system disrupt your daily routine or fit right in? Price vs. value Are you getting professional-level results? Will you need to buy more than one teeth whitener kit to get the smile you want? Teeth whitening can be an easy and affordable way to boost your smile, but choosing the right product makes all the difference. To help you get the best results, the experts at Top Consumer Reviews have reviewed and ranked some of today's most popular teeth whiteners. With the right approach, you can easily get a noticeably whiter smile too! If you're eligible for VAT relief on medical devices, you can claim it on this product.
